The Christmas Imagination
An excerpt from: The Four Seasons and the Archangels, Dr. Rudolf Steiner, October 6, 1923

Ed. Note: As a community we are working to build up our understanding of and connection to the Festivals by working together with Dr. Steiner’s lectures. (So much more rewarding than working alone!) See the Calendar and attached flier for information about The Christmas Imagination gathering. The entire lecture, containing considerably more information and context, is available at:
http://wn.rsarchive.org/Lectures/GA229/English/RSP1968/19231006p01.html

... Hence we can say something like this. In order to bring the essence of Christmas rightly before our souls, let us transpose ourselves into the being of man. In the Christmas spirit is expressed the coming to birth of the Jesus-child, who is ordained to receive the Christ into himself. Let us look closely at this. If we look at the figure of Mary, we are bound to see that her head reflects something heavenly in its whole appearance, its whole expression. We must then indicate that Mary is preparing to take into herself the Sun, the child, the Sun as it rays through the encircling air. And then we can see in the form of Mary the Moon-Earthly element.

Now imagine how this could be portrayed. First we have the Moon-Earth element, spread out below the Earth’s surface. Then, going out into the great spaces, we find a raying forth from man into the cosmos, and this could be shown as a heavenly Earth-star radiance, sent out by the Earth into the cosmos. The head of Mary is like a radiant star, which means that her whole countenance and bearing must give expression to this star-radiant quality (see plate II, p. 2).

If then we turn to the breast, we come to the breathing process; to the Sun-element, the child, forming itself out of the clouds in the atmosphere, shot through by the rays of the Sun.

Further down we come to the Moon-like, salt-forming forces, given outward expression by bringing the limbs into dynamic relation with the Earth and letting them arise out of the salt and the Moon-elements in the Earth. Here we have the Earth in so far as it is inwardly transfigured by the Moon.
All this would really have to be shown through a kind of rainbow colouring. For if we were to look from the cosmos towards the Earth, through the shining of the stars, it would be as though the Earth were wishing to shine inwardly, beneath its surface, in rainbow colours. On the Earth we have something related to the Earth-forces, to gravity and to the formation of the limbs, which can be expressed only through the garment which follows the Earth-forces in its folds. So we should have the garment down below, in relation to the Earth-forces. Then we should have to portray, a little higher up, that which gives expression to the Earth-Moon element. We could even picture the Moon, if we wished to symbolise; but the Moon-element is clearly expressed in the configuration of the Earth.

Higher up still, we must bring in that which comes forth from the Moon-element. We see how the clouds are permeated with many human heads, pressing downwards; one of them is condensed into the Sun resting on Mary's arm: the Jesus-child. And all this must be completed, in an upward direction, through the star-radiance expressed in the countenance of Mary.

If we understand the depths of winter, how it shows us the connection of the cosmos with man, with man who takes up the birth-forces in the Earth, the only possible way of presenting the woman is in this form: formed out of the clouds, endowed with the forces of the Earth: with the Moon-forces below, with the Sun-forces in the middle, and above, towards the head, with the forces of the stars. The picture of Mary with the little Jesus-child arises out of the cosmos itself.

If we understand the cosmos in autumn, so as to represent all its formative forces in a picture, we come by necessity to an artistic portrayal of Michael and the Dragon, as I indicated yesterday. In the same way, everything we feel at Christmas-time flows together into the picture of Mary and the child — that picture which hovered so often before painters in earlier times, especially in the first Christian centuries, and of which the last echoes have been preserved in Raphael's Sistine Madonna. (emphasis added)

The Sistine Madonna was born out of the great instinctive knowledge of nature and the spirit which prevailed in ancient times. For it is a picture of the Imagination which must in fact come to a man who transposes his inner vision into the secrets of Christmas in such a way that they become for him a living picture. Hence we can say: The course of the seasons must come to expression for inner vision in clear and glorious Imaginations. If one goes out with one's whole being into the world, the approach of autumn becomes the glorious Imagination of Michael's fight with the Dragon. Just as the Dragon can be represented only in a sulphurous form — born out of the sulphur-clouds — and just as the sword of Michael emerges when we think of the meteoric iron as concentrated in the sword and blended with it, so out of all that we can feel at Christmas time, arises the picture of Mary the mother, the folds of her robe following the forces of the Earth, while in the region of the breast — even these details are apparent in the painting — her garment has to be inwardly rounded, taking on the quicksilver form, so that here one has a feeling of inward enclosure. Here the Sun-forces can find entry, and the innocent Jesus-child, who must be thought of as having yet received no earthly nourishment, is the Sun-activity resting on Mary's arm, with the radiance of the stars above. That is how we have to represent the head and eyes of Mary, as though a light were shining out from within them towards men. And the Jesus-child in Mary's arm must appear as though emerging from the rounded cloud-shapes, tender and lovable, inwardly sheltered; and then the garment, subject to earthly gravity, expressing what the force of earthly gravity can become (see plate II)

All this is best rendered in colours. Then we have the picture which comes to shine out for us as a cosmic Imagination at Christmas-time — a picture we can live with until Easter, when out of cosmic relationships once again an Easter Imagination can arise; we will speak of it tomorrow.

You will see from this that art is drawn from the heavens and their interplay with the Earth. True art is an expression of that which man experiences in the cosmos, spiritual-psychical-physical, which reveals itself to him in magnificent Imaginations. So, in order to represent all that is involved in the inner struggle for the development of self-consciousness out of nature-consciousness, nothing will do but the grand picture of Michael's fight with the Dragon; and in order to bring before us everything that can work from nature into our souls during the deep winter season, we have an artistic, imaginative expression of it in the picture of the Mother and child.

To observe the course of the seasons is to follow the great cosmic artist, so that the things which the heavens imprint on the Earth are brought to life again in powerful pictures — pictures which grow into realities for the mind of man.

Thus the course of the year can reveal itself to us in four Imaginations: the Michael Imagination, the Mary Imagination and — as we shall see later on — the Easter Imagination and the St. John Imagination.

The 2014 Natural Science/ Mathematics/ Astronomy Section Conference, “A Path Towards Understanding the Imponderable in Nature: Enlivening our Understanding Through Color,” will take place this year in Portland, Oregon. (see calendar listing) The conference is open to members of the School for Spiritual Science who are working out of science or math or astronomy. For this particular meeting, artists who have participated in the color studies at Jannebeth Roell’s studio over the past couple of years, who are also members of the School for Spiritual Science, are also welcome to participate. Please register early or indicate your interest through the website contact page. Space is limited to 15 in Jannebeth’s studio.

We will continue our theme of inner capacity building toward a qualitative science, through the practice of what Rudolf Steiner referred to as “feeling—understanding” in our experiencing of color. We have been studying the collection of lectures by Rudolf Steiner, Colour, Rudolf Steiner Press, 1992, reprinted 2008, 217pp, ISBN 978 1 85584 085 0.

Jannebeth Röell will lead us in this study. We will continue to hone our phenomenological methods of research and to develop new organs of perception. Some of you will remember the work we did in 2006 and 2007 with Jannebeth on Dick van Romunde’s seminal work, About Formative Forces in the Plant World. That first year we worked intensively with the leaf, and the following year with the flower. These were deeply rewarding and valuable conferences. We are pleased to be with Jannebeth again, working now on the inner nature of color. We are also very pleased that Johannes Kühl will be joining us again this year and will bring his research on color in nature. Please contact James Lee by email at anthroposophynow@comcast.net if you have any questions.

Housing Wanted for Science Section Attendees

A few of those attending the Natural Science Section Conference are looking for lodging in private homes with local community members December 4-7. They will pay $35/night for a room with a bathroom. If you have room available contact James Lee at anthroposophynow@Comcast.net

Here Come the Holy Nights Readings

The time for The Holy Nights Readings is fast approaching, and it is time to put in your request to host an evening. For those who have never attended, the readings are every evening during the twelve nights of Christmas. They begin on December 26th and continue until January 6th. Each evening we read a lecture series from 7:30 to about 9:00 and then have some time to socialize and partake of the refreshments provided by our hosts and others. This type of event happens in many anthroposophic communities and has been celebrated here for more than twenty-five years. Last year there were about 14 people each evening and 30 people attended at least one reading.

It is a unique experience to attend an event like this over twelve nights at this time of the year. There are often special events on some of the evenings, including dropping lead on New Years’ Eve. This is an old ritual where people drop molten lead into water and try to see the coming year in the resulting structures.

This year we will be reading The Apocalypse of St John lecture series which we last read in 2007. This has been a crowd favorite.

Please call me at (503)-777-3176 and reserve an evening to host. I will give priority to people who hosted last year if you reserve by November 21st. After the 21st I will give out dates on a first come first serve basis. I look forward to seeing you all during the holy night’s readings.

Marie-Laure Valandro’s Presentation, Workshop & Art Exhibit/Sale

Ms. Valandro graced The Art Hall and everyone who entered with her magnificent and healing paintings, inspired by her beloved teacher, Liane Collot D’Herbois. The titles allude to the inspiration each calls forth: Threshold, Sophia Imagination, Simon/ Buddha/ Child/ Mary, Archangel of Healing, and Moses are just a few of the fourteen sacred works. Taking months to create, these veil paintings reveal the dynamic relationship between light and darkness, out of which is born color. It is clear that Marie-Laure is an artist of great intensity and devotion, carrying forward the important work of her teacher in exploring the healing qualities of color. Ms. Valandro kept us engaged in Cedarwood’s Waldorf School’s adjacent and newly lazered performance space for over an hour during her presentation on The Arts, which was really more a collaborative experience than a lecture. She quickly won over her audience of several dozen with her vitality, depth of knowledge, and love for humanity and its future, focusing on the critical role of the arts in our collective evolution.

Twice during her presentation Marie-Laure invited us all to go back into The Art Hall to participate in an exercise: first to observe the light in a painting and second to note where one’s eyes would naturally fall and focus. In each case we shared our impressions—in the form of a feeling word—and together began to develop an emotional understanding of the power we had experienced. The presentation was both lively and informative and was met with enthusiasm and grand applause.

Friday morning The Art Hall hosted a three-hour workshop on Light and Darkness in charcoal with Marie-Laure. Such a study is a precursor to working with color as first prescribed by Liane and then later taught by Marie-Laure at her school in Wisconsin. Though brief, the workshop gave the thirteen participants more than just a taste of how one begins to understand—and feel—the dynamic tension between light and darkness. We again want to thank Marie-Laure for her thoughtfulness and the tremendous amount of labor she put into wrapping each painting, piling them all in her truck, making the long drive down from Bellingham, and then hanging the show all in one day.

All the paintings are for sale: Marie-Laure donates her proceeds to charity and, as usual, a portion will also go to The Art Hall to support our mission of community enrichment through exhibits and presentations by artists working out of Anthroposophy. If you are interested in a private viewing please contact Robin Lieberman at 503-222-1192 or robin@robinlieberman.net.

Calendar of the Soul

November 30-December 6; Verse 35
Can I know what it is “to be”
So that true life can find itself
Again in soul’s creative urge!
I feel that I am granted power
To make my Self, as humble part,
At home within the cosmic Self.

December 7-13; Verse 36:
Within my being’s depths there speaks,
Intent on revelation,
The cosmic Word mysteriously:
Imbue your labor’s aims
With my bright spirit light
To sacrifice yourself through me.

December 14-20; Verse 37
To carry spirit light into world-winter-night
My heart is ardently impelled,
That shining seeds of soul
Take root in grounds of worlds
And Word Divine through senses’ darkness
Resounds, transfiguring all life.

December 21-27; Verse 38: Christmas Mood
The spirit child within my soul
I feel freed of enchantment.
In heart-high gladness has
The holy cosmic Word engendered
The heavenly fruit of hope,
Which grows rejoicing into worlds afar
Out of my being’s godly roots.

December 28-January 3; Verse 39
In secret inwardly to feel
How all that I’ve preserved of old
Is quickened by new-risen sense of self:
This shall, awakening, pour forth cosmic forces
Into the outer actions of my life
And, in becoming, mould me into true existence.

Advent Sunday 3: Mystery of the Logos: To turn the human heart in love to these great cosmic facts: this is the true content of the festival of remembrance which approaches man each year when he contemplates the cosmic Initiation-Night of Christmas. As we continue in our striving to penetrate and understand the deep significance of the festivals, we will come together to read and explore The Christmas Imagination which was given to us by Rudolf Steiner. This lecture is available at: http://wn.rsarchive.org/Lectures/GA229/English/RSP1968/19231006p01.html

We were pleased to explore together The Michael Imagination in September, and perhaps will be able to continue with The Easter Imagination and The St. Johns Imagination over the course of the year.

“The in the thought of Christmas and the thought of Easter, the soul of man wills to look upon the two great mysteries. And, as it thus looks, it finds in this contemplation strength filled with light for man’s thought, content filled with power for the will, an upright lift of the whole man, from whatever situation he needs this upright lift. As they thus confront us, these two pillars of the spirit – the thought of Christmas and the thought of Easter – they possess an eternal worth.” ~ Rudolf Steiner

Contact Valerie if you have a suggestion for this year’s conversation.

Continuing our striving to penetrate the deep significance of the festivals, we will come together to read and explore The Christmas Imagination which was given to us by Rudolf Steiner.

“In the thought of Christmas and the thought of Easter, the soul of man wills to look upon the two great mysteries. And, as it thus looks, it finds in this contemplation strength filled with light for man’s thought, content filled with power for the will, an upright lift of the whole man, from whatever situation he needs this upright lift. As they thus confront us, these two pillars of the spirit – the thought of Christmas and the thought of Easter – they possess an eternal worth.” ~ Rudolf Steiner
Evil as a Challenge

A Manichaean Journey to the Heart of our Time

With Christine Gruwez

April 24, 25, 26

Cedarwood Waldorf School

The world, in an ever accelerating pace is shaken by violence and the urge to revenge and destroy. Hate, fear and overt cynicism take the upper hand while despair and powerlessness increase. What to do? Can something be done? How do we face these outbursts of evil forces? For many of us, the border has been crossed: we can no longer look away. But then, where to look?

At this point, more than ever, it could become important to learn about the Manichaean stream and about what Rudolf Steiner has told about it. The Dutch Anthroposophist Bernard Lievegoed was the first to clearly denote an intrinsic, although not so well known relationship between anthroposophy and the Manichaean impulse, as Rudolf Steiner has called it. And it is his great merit that he gave the stream of Manichaeism its justified place in the context of what is moving in Anthroposophy as an all-encompassing stream in humanity. To Lievegoed, Anthroposophy as a deed does not appear in its full reality until it is viewed in the light of Manichaeism.

The salvation of the soul, the central motif of Manichaeism, is a deed, a deed to which we are called as contemporaries living in turbulent times. But Manichaeism will have to develop further in the future, as Rudolf Steiner expresses it. Knowledge and wisdom may indeed help us, but they can be no substitute for the actual deed. This deed is related to good and evil as they are present in each of us. This deed becomes a presence which concretizes in a particular relationship to the other, whoever he may be. Only through this can we develop an inner organ to listen to the future. A listening with the heart. In the words of Bernard Lievegoed: More and more people will find methods to help others in the most surprising ways. To put yourself in the service of the difficulties of another person, that is the point!

Fee: $125 including lunch and breaks. Work Study available. Donations to help with Christine’s travel from Europe will be gratefully accepted.

Registration form coming in January.
